

Palm Trees & Their Fruits

Various trees had different kinds of vegetation or fruits. Some produced straw bunches that hung down off the trunks.

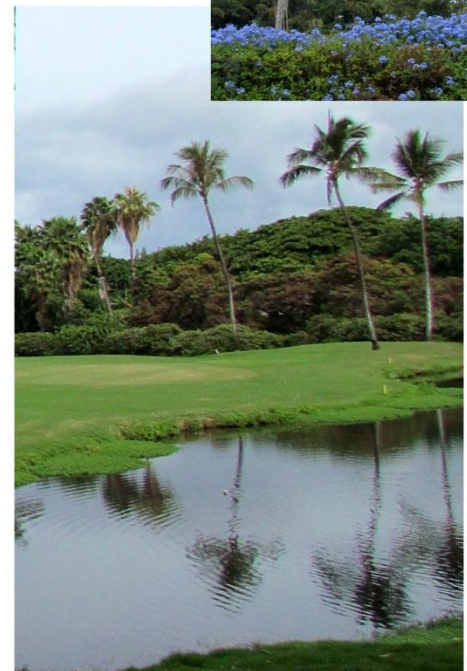

Some had very uniform leaves. Some leaves looked very soft & delicate.

Others looked like coconuts (not sure). When reading up on palm trees - many parts of the tree are edible. They even make palm sugar. Many kinds of Date Palms & Jelly Palms.

To the right shows Palm Trees with clusters of little fruits hanging off the branches.

Hala Tree's Fruit

Other type fruits or berries I was able to photograph...

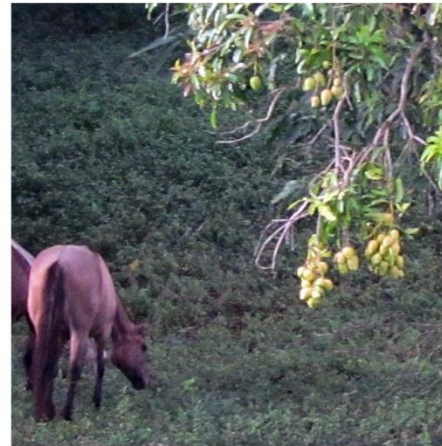

Pejibaye , a relative of the coconut - grow in clusters on palm trees, like miniature coconuts. The part that you eat would correspond to the fibrous husk, while the hard pejibaye seed, when cracked open, reveals a thin layer of bitter white meat around a hollow core.

I was so happy to get a picture of these bananas. That's the banana's flower hanging towards the ground. It produces liquid nectar that tastes sweet. Even the flower can be eaten. It's a mystery on what the top right plant is...looks like bunches of bananas growing downward.

Came across some trees with green fruit that looks like limes...but different leaves.

I believe this tree by the horse is a Guava tree
